On a recent Saturday morning we came across former mayor Larry Harris (left) removing signs that are placed on utility poles throughout our area. He has long realized that the nails and staples used to secure these signs present a hazard for our utility workers.

After a bit of research we discovered that it is in fact a Class C Misdemeanor to place signs on poles and bandit signs on city and state rights-of-way near public roads.

Below is a photo of Patrol Officer Ricky Skarpa, deceased in 2019, who served both in Liberty and Dayton, who also had a pet peeve about the signs on poles and bandit signs on the side of the road. Instead of a shovel, he would carry a chain in the trunk of his patrol car to be used for quickly dislodging these nuisances.

It appears that Larry is carrying on Ricky's legacy.
